NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT.

EDITOR NATIONAL TRIBUNE: On the second day after the Rheatown and Pugh's Hill fight, "we'uns" were after Geo, Dallas Mosgrove and his "critterback" comrades hot-footed. When near-ing the town of Blountville a halt was made, men dismounted and preparations began for making corn coffee. About the time our rail pile fires began to blaze nice-W. S. B., Equality, III.—No State militing our rail pile fires began to blaze nice by "to hoise" sounded, and 'twas whis pered that the Johnnies were coming for us. We cussed and swore, and wondered if they were as hungry as we were. Our artillery pushed on toward Blomtvilic, and soon commenced to throw shell. The pension of the President. None of the Kentucky militia appears to have been called into service by the President. measles, saits, etc. United States is singular in number, plural in form only. The motto of the United States, E. Pluribus Unum, signifying one of many, proves this. The South in its claim for the right of secession, virtually claims "are," while the North just as firmly claimed "is" was right; or, in other words, that the United States was a Nation with a great big N, and not a mere confederation of warring States. We would never think of saying Switzerland are, in stead of Switzerland is; but Switzerland of Switzerland is; but Switzerland is singular in form. U. S. Grant, in one of his messages, while President, used the term "United States is" and was severely ridiculed by those who ought to have known better; but the head of glorious Ulysses was level in this particular as well as nearly all others. No, Mr. Editor, we should never say the United States are, unless we wish to refer to them in their individual capacity, but as a Nation—the United States is one undivided and indissolable, now and forever.—Francis R.
